Course Description

Survey of the major developments in American history from the Columbian conquests to the Era of Reconstruction. Includes Colonial America, the Formative Years (1776-1815,) the Early National Period (1815-1850,) and the coming of the Civil War and its aftermath. Also includes the social, intellectual, and political aspects of early American life.

Student Learning Outcomes

Students will –

1. Demonstrate an understanding of major developments in American history from the arrival of Columbus through the American Civil War (~ 1492 to 1865); recognize and describe the connection between social, political, economic, and intellectual trends and events.

2. Understand the role, contributions, and historical challenges of Native Americans and other groups underrepresented in traditional U.S. historical narratives.
3. Apply critical-thinking skills in assessing historical narratives and sources; consider and evaluate multiple perspectives, including Himdag, in a historical context.
4. Exercise, refine, and demonstrate skills in research, analysis, and writing.
5. Understand the interdisciplinary nature of the study of history and recognize differences in approach between science, philosophy, political science, and economics to political, governmental, and social questions.

Course Structure

The course will fuse lecture and online activities to provide students with maximum opportunities to engage with one another, the instructor, and assigned course material.

Writing is a major component of the course.

Writing assignments emphasize critical inquiry – including gathering, interpreting, and evaluating information appropriate to the area of study – through attention to the process of writing. Practice of various strategies, such as focusing ideas, drafting, revising, critical reading and research using outside sources, support the writing process.

The capstone for the course is a research paper on a topic from a list of subjects provided by the instructor. The paper will be 5 to 7 pages in length (~ 1,250 to 1,750 words), be double spaced, and include a cover page and bibliography (not included in page count).

Students will also participate in weekly forums that develop and assess their research, reasoning, and writing skills, as well as promoting collaboration and cooperation with classmates.

Students will be invited to respond to a discussion question from the instructor each week. Responses should be 250 to 500 words in length, not counting reference lists. Initial responses are due no later than 11:59 PM Arizona time each Friday.

Following their initial posts, students will respond to the posts of at least two of their classmates. Responses should include direct questions, offer additional sources of information, or provide a new perspective on the topic being discussed. Responses should be between 100 and 250 words and are due no later than 11:59 PM Arizona time each Sunday.

Himdag Cultural Component

The study of history is a study of culture: each event examined and every story told is informed by the perspective, values, and objectives of the storyteller. A critical consideration of the past and the narratives offered to explain it provides a valuable opportunity for understanding and appreciating different cultures, reflecting on the interaction of those cultures and our own, and building a sense of respect between peoples.

A study of the history of the United States and its peoples reinforces and is reinforced by Himdag.

Students will have an opportunity to:

Consider the role of Native peoples in the larger American story: T-Wohocudadag.

Reflect on the material production, culture, and well-being of others, particularly in the areas of physical and spiritual health and healing practices, providing us an additional way to reflect on our own historical place and healing practices: T-Apedag.

Respectively study other cultures, leading to a deeper understanding and respect for one's own: T-Pi:K Elida.

Work with classmates, sharing skills, practicing teamwork, and building a sense of community: I-We:mta.
